

I have had Seal Point Siamese cats before, I had a mother and son, they were the best and after a very long life, I lost them, I was heartbroken. After many years finally, my heart was ready. I quickly found out and was surprised that the breed was so hard to find. Our original plan was to get 2 kittens than a dog. Well since I couldn't find a breeder, we flipped our plan and got a Puppy. After we recovered from puppy shock, I started my search again that is when I found Tom of Black Thai Cattery. I reached out and Tom texted me to have a chat, I tried to keep my cool I was so excited that my search had been successful and as we spoke I could hear the distinctive chatter of a Siamese Cat, I said OMG I can hear the babies, Tom said "What" I said I can hear the cats I have missed that so so much, he laughed and said you are a Siamese person. Immediately I was put on the waitlist with the warning it may be a year or more until he had kittens to fulfill his waitlists, but I didn't care. Good things come to those who wait.

Earlier than I expected I received notice that kittens were born, I was so happy, excited, and crying because it was my time for kittens again. That is when I found out what a great team Tom and his daughters are. The weekly progress reports, photos, kitten tips and tricks, more information than I thought I needed were sent and it all was perfect everything and more that I needed to prepare for my kittens. Tom, let us know the order of picks and told us you will pick the right kitten for you there is not a wrong pick. I wanted Seal Point kittens so we had to wait and see if enough kittens with the dark points would be available. I had third and fourth pick luckily two were available to us.

I flew down for pick up day and had the pleasure of meeting Tom and his family and all the cats/kittens, I was in heaven the kittens were not afraid of this stranger and very curious, they wanted to play and every one of them inspected and napped my carrier, they checked out my handbag and me... When it was time to head out my kittens went into the carrier for the flight home, they were perfect Kenny wanted his presence to be known and when I was checking in someone said I hear a cat, I said that is me, I have baby kittens and the line of folks checked out my carrier. We had a flight delay, but these kittens are so well raised that they took the delay and the flight like old pros.

They met their big brother Eli on the car ride home, they were ok in the carrier, but Eli had no idea what was to come. We arrived home and let them explore their areas and they basically took over. As Tom told us Show them the litter box and Food and they know what to do. I didn't need to show them they found both right away. Once the kittens had a good look around, we then brought Eli in to see his new siblings. That is when the "I hate you Mom" looks or the "I wanted a puppy look" was given our dog was quite put out for a while but he now looks for them it is very sweet. Kenny (Brown Collar) is a sweet purr machine; he is cautious, vocal, and cuddly. When he can't see his people, we hear him and tell him I am over here, and he comes running and snuggles up. He spends every morning when I am working sitting with me while I work. Kona (Purple Collar) is the brave explorer. He takes over any room he is in, He was the first one to go nose to nose with the dog, His favorite pass time is taunting the dog, he lets him chase then dives under the couch and pokes his head out, he has a look that says, "you can't get me now". Kona likes to snuggle under my chin then he is off to chase his brother or a toy play is very important to him. Who knew that two little kittens could be so loud? I heard running and thought the 80-pound dog was chasing the kittens, NOPE it was two 4-pound kittens running and jumping. These babies are heavy-footed, and it is hysterical. The two kittens have their battles many times a day, they run, box, tumble, wrestle and act like they hate each other and in a blink of an eye, they are grooming each other and then curled up snoozing. The past few weeks have been so joyful for us, but the minute the kittens found their way to the living room windowsill and stretched out in the Sun just like my cats did so many years ago, I finally had what I have been missing. Our hearts are full.

The kittens have taken over the house and our hearts. It is so fun to see them grow and open up to Eli, he is very sweet and gentle with them. They are not curled up and sleeping with each other yet, but we are very close, give it a few weeks and I will have my perfect photo for the Christmas card. I can't wait. If you are a Siamese cat fan then you have found the perfect breeder don't look any further, contact Tom, you can't go wrong here.

Tom, I am grateful for you and your family. The care and love you pour into all these kittens are priceless and I am so happy I found you. I came home with the PERFECT kittens. I have no words to express the happiness these kittens have brought to our lives and how much I have missed having cats and how much I had missed my previous cats.

Thank you and the best to you and your family

Cheryl, Marc, Eli, Kenny, and Kona
